The Italian monarchy was never very popular. The line of Italian kings is rather short. It runs from 1861 to 1946. Less than one hundred years. When Mussolini and his fascist party came to power in 1922, the king and Mussolini found a way to work together. The fact that the monarchy was associated with fascism did not make it more popular.

The Italian referendum was intended only to determine whether the head of state should come from a family dynasty or be elected by popular vote. Democracy was not a new concept in Italian politics. The Kingdom of Piedmont had become a constitutional monarchy with the liberalizing reforms of King Charles Albert's famous Albertine Statute in 1848. Suffrage, initially limited to select citizens ...
