Malena (2000) — Giuseppe Tornatore | Synopsis ...

Malena, who is a schoolteacher and of at least average intelligence, must be aware of her effect on the collective local male libido, but seems blissfully oblivious; her role is not so much dramatic as pictorial (a word I am using in the Playboy sense).

Malena and the Hungry Lion Race was born as a dream. I saw how the people at a certain insurance broker where I worked a long time ago would let their entire life pass by at the keyboard and were clicking thousands of times a day, but that wasnt what they dreamed about or wanted to do. They were unhappy. One day, I asked them, If they could choose, what would they do right then? They surprised me with their answers: they wanted to be painters or writers, to sell coats, or to simply live beside a river. Many people were disillusioned with the life that they had been living, and to tell the truth, I was as well. I decided that if I continued to do something that I didnt like, at the very least, I would leave my little cousin Mara Paula a story that would tell her that she has to fight for her dreams, regardless of what they are, and that way, I would fulfill one of my own: that of writing a story. I made a deal with one of my best friends, Pedro, for him to help me with the illustrations, and here is the result.

How are love, marriage, and desire changing? This collection confronts that question, examining how global cultural flows, changing gender relations, specific economic structures, and state policies are reshaping intimate life around the world. Grounded in cutting edge feminist anthropological theory, these essays discuss how women and men craft courtship, intimacy, and marriage around the world, situating intimate relations in their respective social and economic contexts and exposing the dynamics that are shared cross-culturally, as well as those characteristics that are specific to each site. In this first comparative ethnographic look at the global transformation toward marital ideals characterized by emotional intimacy, companionship, and mutual choice–discussed here as “companionate marriage”–Modern Loves asks how this shift is occurring and explores the factors that promote and hinder it, just who is pushing for these more companionate relationships, and what advantages men and women see in modern love. The contributors analyze the intricate negotiations surrounding love, marriage, and sex in Mexico, India, Papua New Guinea, Brazil, Pakistan, Nigeria, Singapore, and Hong Kong and among Latino youth in East Los Angeles. Modern Loves presents the new global approach to kinship studies, examining both the microlevel practices that constitute and bind relationships and the macrolevel forces that shape the landscape of love. Contributors: Margaret E. Bentley, Selina Ching Chan, Pamela I. Erickson, Jessica Gregg, Jennifer Higgins, Jennifer S. Hirsch, Wynne Maggi, Constance A. Nathanson, Gayatri Reddy, Daniel Jordan Smith, and Holly Wardlow Jennifer S. Hirsch is Associate Professor in the Department of Sociomedical Sciences, Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University. Holly Wardlow is Assistant Professor of Anthropology at the University of Toronto. "What’s love got to do with it? Hirsch and Wardlow answer this question by demonstrating the relevance–indeed, centrality–of the ideologies and practices surrounding romantic love and companionate marriage to the study of social transformation more broadly. The essays compiled in this volume explore the material, structural, and demographic underpinnings of the global shift in marital ideals while also tracing some of the sources of this marital shift in mass media, missionization, and the spread of individualism. The contributors of the chapters provide ethnographically rich examples of the ways in which people living in different societies interpret and act upon these global forces and images in sometimes overlapping and sometimes varying ways. This volume is an important and thoughtful contribution to the study of emotion, gender, kinship, and social change." –Laura M. Ahearn, Department of Anthropology, Rutgers University "With its rich descriptions of the nuances in romantic love and its lucid analysis of the political economy of conjugal relations, this book will be widely read and loved by anthropologists as well as the concerned public." –Yunxiang Yan, Department of Anthropology, UCLA "Modern Loves offers an overview of current scholarship on love in the context of sexual relationships cross-culturally, and provides a view of the complexity of varied aspects of emotion, social structure, and social change in contemporary sexual relationships. It clearly makes the case for a political economic understanding of the emergence of ideologies of love, marriage, and courtship as part of expanding global economies." –Linda-Anne Rebhun, Department of Anthropology, Yale University

Tried and convicted for being one known to possess magical abilities, as well as being caught using demons and dark magic, Princess Malena sits in a cell, awaiting her punishment. Death Gillock, advisor to the king and queen, has a different idea. His plan: to get Malena's side of the story, and before the penalty of death is enacted, banish her to the Void. It is the least he can do for the royal family, who has kept his secret for so many years. Casting a small spell to set Malena at ease, Gillock sets about writing down her tale. What he discovers, however, is a sad story of a simple life, and the tragedy that pushed Malena to become the person that all see today.

In a future world, where the rich have become immortal, by making a deal with the devil, a renegade female soldier, whose favorite weapon is a machine gun loaded with silver bullets, attempts to bring peace to a shattered world, by killing demons and humans, who are hell bent on taking over the world, but...will her own demons stop her?Malena is an orphan, who was raised in a branch of the church, which believed in a more "hands on" approach to confronting demons, specifically, the use of modern weapons, including machine guns, loaded with silver bullets. Malena was taught how to shoot, with Malena's favorite weapon quickly becoming a TEC-9, machine gun. Malena was also taught various forms of Martial Arts, as she was being trained to become a warrior of the church. Rebellious from the beginning, she left the church, in order to deliver her own form of justice and...on her own terms. As a result of leaving the church, Malena gave up her divine powers, returning her to mere human form, with no special, super human strengths. To survive, Malena had to rely on her own abilities, which included exceptional marksmanship skills, knowledge of firearms, and hand-to-hand combat. One night, Malena is attacked by several DEMON SOLDIERS. After escaping the attack on her life, Malena identifies one of the attackers as having a distinctive TRIANGLE TATTOO. In researching the tattoo, Malena identifies the attacker as a street thug, who she had killed, several years earlier, while he was in human form. In secret, Malena enlists the assistance of one of her former church teachers, in order to identify the meaning of the TRIANGLE TATTOO. In her investigation, Malena discovers a connected nightclub, called the ANGEL OF LIGHT CLUB. While checking out the club, a group of former priests and nuns, attack the club, in their attempt to kill some demons. After Malena rescues one of the attackers, they invite her to join their group, because of her exceptional fighting skills and her skills are needed, in order to crush the demons. While at the club, Malena meets Samantha, who appears innocent. Malena saves Samantha from the demons and a romance begins, while Malena tries to discover the identity of Simon and his evil plans. Simon is identified as the owner of the ANGEL OF LIGHT CLUB, as well as having a warehouse, where he is apparently resurrecting dead criminals and turning them into demons. Simon is also identified as being directed by an unknown person. At his warehouse, Simon is also preparing to ship his newly resurrected demons to unknown locations. When Malena gets too close and threatens to ruin his plans, Simon sends his demon army to destroy Malena's faith, in an effort to bring her to his side; killing her would be too easy. Facing her own internal demons, Malena reaffirms her faith and foils Samantha's attempt to destroy her, which angers Malena to the point where she becomes...Mad Malena.

Stories depict a way-of-life of the Hispanic culture of South Texas where superstition still rules the lives of many. La Llorona scans the waters of the Rio Grande looking for her children; little DuenDES create a ruckus to gain attention; the Grim Reaper skulks about the corridors of the big house biding its time; ghosts guarding treasure inhabit back yards and the brushlands along the Rio Grande; Sasquatch sloshes along on the shores of South Padre in freezing weather on an Easter weekend, and snakes love mothers’ milk and menstrual blood. Experience with ghosts or other supernatural phenomena is as prevalent today in South Texas as it has been for hundreds of years.
