Men at Arms (1952) is the first volume of Evelyn Waugh's trilogy Sword of Honour. The novels cover events in the second world war seen largely from the point of view of a willing volunteer - Guy Crouchback. He is eager to serve his country and has old-fashioned views on chivalry and the role of the English gentleman.

Men at Arms - a tutorial and study guide

MEN AT ARMS (1) In June 1951, Evelyn left Piers Court and went to the Hotel Du Chateau in Chantilly on the River Oise in northern France. He went on his own. Or, rather, he took with him his war diaries with a view to begin what was to become the Sword of Honour trilogy. One day he read the diaries and the next he began writing.
