The friends-to-lovers trope is one of my favourites in the genre, and one of my favourite examples of it is Julia Quinn's Romancing Mister Bridgerton, the fourth book in her iconic series about the eight Bridgerton siblings.

I'm fully in love with the Bridgerton series. This is the 4th book in the series and jumps a number of years from the last novel. Romancing Mister Bridgerton focuses on Colin and how he and Penelope ended up falling in love (which isn't a spoiler because it's mentioned in the earlier books). One thing that made me unable to put this book down was that it had a massive series spoiler/secret in it.

Would you listen to Romancing Mister Bridgerton again? Why? Probably. It stands out from many of the other books in the series and was entertaining. What about Rosalyn Landor's performance did you like? She always delivers a captivating performance. I particularly like how she portrays a jovial mood in characters over the Bridgerton series.
